DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) The invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-4 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kaitani et al. U.S. Patent No. 6,259,226.

Referring to claim 1, Kaitani et al. discloses a controller for an AC motor (see all figures and respective portions of the specification). Kaitani et al. further discloses a motor controller having exciting current detectors (4), an exciting current amplitude computation means (106 and 7) for computing an exciting current amplitude value and a voltage impression unit (3) for impressing voltages at values corresponding to the exciting current amplitude value.

As to claim 2, Kaitani et al. discloses that the controller is for an AC motor, wherein stepping motors are included. Additionally the voltage impression unit (3) feeds the motor winding currents varying in the form of a sine wave provided by a sine wave generator (6) every time a command pulse is impressed.

Referring to claim 3, wherein the motor winding currents are fed by a PWM inverter (3).

As to claim 4, Kaitani et al. further describes a current amplitude deviation detection means (10 or 12) for computing a current amplitude deviation value representing a difference between a current amplitude command (i_{da}^* , i_{qa}^) and exciting current amplitude value (i_{da} , i_{qa}); a current command computation means (13 or 11) and multiplication means (17) for computing current commands in the form of at least one of sine wave signal and cosine wave signal as provided by the sine wave generator (6) on the basis of an angle command (θ_{re}) for multiplying the values corresponding to the deviation values, and outputting the voltage impression signals (V_{ua}^ , V_{va}^* , V_{wa}^*) to a voltage impression unit (3).

Referring to claim 6, the motor is a three-phase AC motor and the current command computation means compute the current commands in the form of sine wave signals as provided by the sine wave generator (6) on the basis of an angle command (θ_{re}).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made. See in addition MPEP § 706.02(1)(1) and § 706.02(1)(2).

3. Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kaitani et al. in view of Kuwano et al. U.S. Patent No. 6,747,433.

4. Referring to claim 5, Kaitani et al. addresses all the limitations of the base claim above, but does not explicitly describes having a motor control device as claimed being applied to a two-phase AC motor. On the other hand, Kuwano et al. discloses a two-phase AC stepping motor controller wherein the stepping motor is controlled by a PWM inverter (70). Since Kaitani and Kuwano are in the same field of endeavor, Kaitani would have recognized the purpose disclosed by Kuwano. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use a two-phase or three-phase motor, since according to the wiring method on the stator, the AC motor can be classified into any phase type.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 7-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if incorporated in the independent claim they depend on, including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

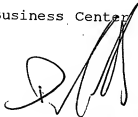

5. The prior art made of record in form 892 and not specifically relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure to further show the state of the art.
